MRS. WILLIAM BUTLER.

The Venerable Founder of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society.

Mrs. William Butler of Newton Center, Mass., "our mother of missions," as she is called, the venerable founder of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, is a remarkable woman and in spite of her great age and life of privation and hardship is still vigorous and active in the sphere of life to which she has devoted her energy and her intellect.

In 1856, with her husband and two children, Mrs. Butler sailed for India. Her missionary labors were disturbed by the Indian mutiny three years later. "We barely escaped with our lives," she said to a reporter, "and for months were supposed by our friends to be dead. A month after we took to the mountains another child was born to me. We were trying to get round to Delhi at the time, and I had a goat to provide milk for the baby. One night a tiger came and carried off the goat."

There was not one native Christian in all that part of India then. Mrs. Butler, now in her eighty-fifth year, is planning to attend the forthcoming jubilee of Methodism in India—its fiftieth anniversary—when 150,000 native Christians will give her a great ovation. The sum of $50,000 is to be raised by the Methodist women as a special thank offering for her splendid services in the cause of Methodism.—New York Tribune.

How She Keeps Her Servants.

Good Sense Xmas Gifts

There is nothing more pleasing to a woman than a gift of a piece of nicely ornamented china or rich cut glass or shapely pottery. And there's a heap of good sense in the selection, because of the permanency of its character.

Just a few days remain before Christmas. If any presents are still unbought our stock offers many suggestions at attractive prices. Your dollar will buy more "show" combined with real merit, here than anywhere we know of.

Let us prove it!

never having trouble with her numerous servants and retaining them in her service for years:

She pays good wages—that is, she pays as liberally as she can afford and is always punctual in payment.

She allows her servants a reasonable share of all the dainties served the family and is liberal in the matter of their food, maintaining that good work cannot be done on an empty stomach.

She rarely criticizes, but when reproof is needed gives it with firmness and without fear, but kindly.

Praise is always given when due; she thinks it well to acknowledge good service to encourage.

She allows each reasonable time for outings and to attend church, and she does not require service when a girl is taking her afternoon off.

She allows her maids time to keep their clothes in order, and requires them to be neat, cleanly and orderly about their sleeping apartments.

She is never familiar; only evinces a kindly interest in the general welfare without becoming in any way involved in the family affairs of any one of her servants.

If a matter goes wrong, she takes time to investigate before reproving and never scolds or rebukes when angry.

It is necessary to dismiss a servant, she never does so when in a temper.

MRS. WILLIAM BUTLER, MOTHER OF MISSIONS.

but waits until she can control herself, so as to command respect.

She will not allow her maids to gossip about her neighbors' affairs nor to make remarks about one member of the family to another.

She will not allow her children to be rude or insolent to the servants, nor will she allow too great familiarity.

And her servants remain with her decades and are devoted to her.

Two Wives and a Maid.
A Young Maiden sought the counsel of Two Wives.

"Tell me," said she, "when I am wed, is it wise to be jealous of my Husband?"

Said One Wife:
"Often am I Jealous of my Husband, but carefully do I hide my Jealousy. Thus he doth never suspect it, and so do I keep his Love and his Respect."

Said the Other Wife:
"I care not what my Husband may do, and never am I Jealous of him. Yet often do I pretend that I am Greatly Jealous and exhibit brave fits of Jealousy before him. Thus do I keep his Love and his Respect."

"Ah," quoth the Young Maiden, "I learn, then, that the Wise Woman concealeth Jealousy when it is present and feigneth it when it is absent. Remembering this, I, too, shall be enabled to keep my Husband's Love and his Respect."—Life.

Home Dressmaking.

There is no way in which a woman can save so much money as in making her own clothes, but to do it to the best advantage she needs to have knowledge and experience. Working with a home dressmaker is a good training, and taking advantage of the tricks of the trade as seen in the shop windows will save time and trouble. For instance, the large buttons on outside garments of the better class have small buttons on the inside to hold them in place. The thread is not as firm as this little helper and not as tightly. Frocks made from material with a loose weave have a narrow

AMUSEMENTS

MABEL PAIGE
In the Dainty Comedy
At Cozy Corners.

"A Pair of Pinks."

Eddie Judge, one of the famous English Judge family of acrobats, has a decidedly novel character in West and Vokes, and Margaret Daly Vokes' new edition of their big fun frolic "A Pair of Pinks," which is coming here to-night.

He represents a deaf and dumb constable in search of some one to arrest, but failing to find a legal prey—in fact, he is both prolific and acrobatic in his efforts to make each one stand as the candidate for incarceration.

His agile, active entrances and exits are both a source of merriment and wonder, as he does not hesitate to bound over tree tops, through doors and windows, or over the jail wall at his option.

While his arrests, by sign, are numerous, yet at the end of the play he has not secured a single victim, but probably caused a number of fines for it is against the rules of the stage direction for any one to notice the country constable during the performance. Mr. Judge will also introduce his extraordinary acrobatic specialty which has won him fame as an expert throughout the world.

"Mabel Paige."

The dainty comedy drama "At Cozy Corners," in which Mabel Paige is starring this season is considered one of the most delightful plays of its kind ever presented for the approval of the critical public and so successful has it proven that this season it was chosen from a hundred others, to serve as a vehicle for the starring tour of this popular actress.

Miss Paige, is well known to the playing public having been one of the most successful stars since her first appearance as the Little Lord in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" when it was predicted by the late Joseph Jefferson that her future in the realm of stardom was assured and the beloved dean of the profession's prophecy has proven correct.

Miss Paige by her conscientious endeavors has placed herself at the top of the ladder in her walk of life and not only has she made an artistic success but a financial one and has had many tempting offers from Broadway managers but like May Irwin she feels content to produce her own plays where she is not limited in a monetary way.

Miss Paige will appear in "At Cozy Corners" at the opera house Monday night. Seats now on sale.

tape stitched with the seams so that they cannot pull out. Buttonholes are often strengthened with lip line applied before the cutting or with machine stitching between two rows of which the hole is cut. These are what I mean by tricks of the trade.—Boston Traveler.

Cleaning Velvet.

A jeweler told this splendid secret for cleaning velvet. I had taken to him for riveting a little dangle bag, to be suspended from a silver clasp. As he gave it back into my hands he said, "It will need to be brushed." Then, with a smile, for I was an old patron, he added: "I'll tell you a secret. Dip your velvet brush in damp sand, and see, the velvet comes forth as fresh as though it were new. It is a cleaning process, too, for the slight moisture removes dust, and the harsh action of the sandy friction gives new life to the nap which has been worn down."

A Damaged Mirror.

To repair a damaged mirror pour upon a sheet of tinfoil about three drams of quicksilver to the square foot of foil. Rub smartly with a piece of buckskin until the foil becomes brilliant. Lay the glass upon a flat table face downward. Place the foil upon the damaged portion of the glass, lay a sheet of paper over the foil and place upon it a block of wood or a piece of marble with a perfectly flat surface; put upon it sufficient weight to press it down tightly; let it remain in this position a few hours. The foil will adhere to the glass.

The Bedroom Lamp Shade.

On a plain silk lamp shade for use in sleeping apartments in an upper hall or in a dining room dainty red roses or forget-me-nots could be painted in the center for ornament, making a border at the top and bottom by joining the flowers into wreaths. Or if the plain shade needs decoration a pretty piece of gimp could be sewed on diamond shape, running from the top to the bottom.

Blistered Linen.

To prevent blistering in linen, which is almost always due to bad starching, but occasionally to ironing the articles when too wet, each article must be well starched through, and when about to iron it must be dampened evenly, but not wet. Use a hot iron. Collars and cuffs that have to be turned down should be fixed in the proper shape immediately after each one is ironed, for then the starch is still flexible.

Orange Salad.

Sour oranges may be utilized in a delicious salad. Slice the oranges not too thin and remove the skin, leaving the pulp in small triangular pieces. Serve on lettuce or crisp water cress, with French dressing or white mayonnaise. The little oranges called cumquats are very good indeed served in exactly the same way. Blanched English walnuts combined with such sal-

Keeping Your Figure.

Always carry the chest further in front of you than any other part of you, certainly than the part below the waist, but draw this latter part up and up many times a day, especially if you are inclined to get fat there, and nothing destroys a figure more than this, which has been described as "the middle aged spread."

Library Books.

Did you ever think of the danger that may come through the innocent habit of reading library books? They are universal property, and the hand that has turned the leaves just before you may be a vehicle for contamination of any kind. Inhale a disinfectant and expose the books to one before use.

GOOD POINTS OF A GOOD BEER

THERE ARE SOME PRETTY GOOD
WAYS TO TELL A FIRST-CLASS ARTICLE FROM A CHEAP ONE.

Take a bottle and hold it up to the light. If there is any druggery, filmy condition in the bottom, put it down. It is green. But turn a bottle upside down—if it livenes up with bubbly carbonic gas, and straightway clears, so there is no filmy sediment—if it shines with brilliance, it is well aged, pure and properly put up.

In a good beer, you can scent the aroma of hops the minute the bottle is opened, but after all is said, the best way to tell a high grade beer is to look for the label "American Queen," the product of the Acme Brewing Company, Macon, Ga.
